

K-Love is such an inspiration in my community. Most of my Sunday school class listens to K-Love. There is another Christian radio station in the community, but it the type of music it plays in for a younger generation, which is great, but not my type of music. When I have it on my my van and have to car pool kids they enjoy listening to it. Even though they do not listen to it themselves. K-Love has local events in the community to get its listeners involved, just like other locally operated stations.

K-LOVE is such a part of the Oklahoma City area that if it was to go away there would be a big void in the community. They try to get the entire community involved in activities. They provide fee advstisment to non-profit agencies in the area so you are collected to the local happenings and we also get information on the national level. The news they provide is from the Christian view and that is wonderful.

I would not like to see K-LOVE or any other type of radio station be forced to change it format. This happened before in Oklahoma City and K-Love took over. The bright star in the darkness.
